IT'S A WONDERFUL LIFE: A LIVE RADIO PLAY

A group of actors and technicians gather in a 1940's radio station at holiday time to perform a live broadcast of "It's A Wonderful Life." Replete with Foley sound effects, commercials from the era, and sprinkled throughout with a generous dose of music and humor, this charming piece brings the famous story to life in a new way and fills the theatre with the inspiring spirit of the holidays.

MISS GALVIN & MISS MARMORA'S CLASS - - - - - The Fall of a Tyrant

Macduff seeks out Prince Malcolm in England, and urges him to return to Scotland. While there, Macduff discovers that his family has been killed at the hands of the treacherous King Macbeth. Lady Macbeth is discovered sleepwalking and confessing her guilt in the death of Duncan. The English forces arrive in Scotland. To disguise their numbers, they pull down limbs and carry them before them. Macbeth is told that the wood of Birnam Wood is marching on the castle. Macbeth faces Macduff on the battlefield, only to discover that his opponent was not "born of woman." Macbeth is killed in battle, and Malcolm is named King of Scotland.
